One of the nation's highly respected fiscal experts. Maurice Stans, former Director Bureau of the Budget, has expressed concern over the inroads that inflation, the silent tax, is making on the American economy.

He said that we need only look back to the days of 1960 to 1965, when prices rose only 1.4 percent a year. In 1966 we had a 3 per cent inflation or double the 1960-65 rate, and in 1967 another.
